

FORWARD

REPLY

REPLY ALL

DELETE

From: Hazard
To: Seymour

Subject: Your Biggest Fan

Dear Mr. Seymour:

I am familiar with your work. In fact, I subscribe to your newsletter, your blog, your podcast, your vlodcast, your forum, your FAQ, your Facebook page, your MySpace page and your fan club. I also follow your Tweets. You might say I am your biggest fan. My friend and I are trying to build a solar powered battery that can be embedded in a mouse or keyboard to power a laptop. Unfortunately, we don't know how. I am interested in your thoughts. I know that if there is anyone in the world who can figure this out, it is you.

I hope that this email does not distract you from your work, and that you do not think it an imposition and that I didn't annoy you with my stupid questions, and that you don't mind taking the time to read this (although if you don't have time to respond, I completely understand, it's an honor just to send a note to your personal email address, so a reply would be nearly overwhelming, and anyway I told Hap you were too busy to respond, but he insisted, so really this is all his fault, because he made me send this.)

Thank you for your time.

Your fan,
Hazard

FORWARD | REPLY | REPLY ALL | DELETE

From: Seymour
To: My Biggest Fan
Subject: Let's Talk

Dear Hazard:

Thank you for your email. I know that you are my biggest fan. I recognize your email address from my Leonard Cohen Covercast. I have very many ideas about how to help you. What you want to do is possible and even scalable. But, you are right. You cannot just hookup batteries to solar panels. It is more complicated than that and it will take more of a patchwork of rights and technologies.

I would be happy to talk with you about this. Perhaps we could set up a Skype video conference. I have time later today.

Sincerely,
Seymour